Genealogical Record.

Thomas Battelle, whose descendants comprise, as it is supposed, all of the name of Battelle, with various spellings, in the Northern and Western sections of the United States, was of Dedham, Norfolk county, Massachusetts. The family of Battle, in North Carolina, to which Judge William H. Battle belongs, is, possibly, descended from Thomas Battelle; but this is uncertain. The tradition in the North Carolina family is, that its ancestor came directly from England to Virginia. Family tradition can not, however, be relied on, and this family may be descended from Thomas Battelle, perhaps, through Jonathan, a son of Thomas, a branch of the family not very fully traced.

The descendants of Thomas Battelle, in the male line, seem to be much less numerous than those of most other progenitors who immigrated to this country at as early a period, and whose genealogies have been published. In what year, and from what part of England Thomas Battelle came over to the Massachusetts Bay Colony, is not ascertained. The name of Battelle was recorded as a family name in England as early as the twelfth century. It would seem to have been of Norman origin. It had two coats of arms.

Thomas Battelle, in his numerous signatures, which remain in the public records of Dedham, always spells his name as here written. The name was probably pronounced by him Battaly, as his pastor records his name with that spelling in every instance, and it is also thus spelled in other records.

The first record in which the name of Thomas Battelle appears in Dedham, is that of his marriage, recorded thus: "Thomas Battaly and Mary Fisher was married the 5 of 7 mo., 1648." In the same year, November 4th, there was a grant to him by Henry Brooke, one of the original proprietors of the town, of four acres of land, adjoining the house lot of Rev. John Allen, the pastor. This lot of four acres was not his house lot, which was another lot elsewhere described in the records, so as to identify it with the house lot of his descendant, EBENEZER BATTELLE, a hundred years later. A portion of the grants of land to him were clearly the same which have remained in the family in the Western part of the original township, formerly called the Springfield precinct, which is now the town of Dover. By the indications of the record, THOMAS BATTELLE enjoyed his share of the appointments of the town—that of Selectman in 1677 and four other years, and of Town Clerk from 1687 for —— years. The latter preserves to us the personal memorial of a distinct and practical handwriting. His property, as indicated by the assessment for taxes, seems to have been above the average of that of his townsmen; his average was above the eleventh in a list of one hundred or more. As his sons came forward, and age settled upon him, a division of his property is manifest. In 1691, the year of his wife's death, his assessment is nearly a third less than that of his son John. In 1698, his assessment, on a small rate, is at £1 6s., John's at £4 3s., Jonathan's, £3 4s. In 1705, only the names of the two sons appear. This looks naturally to the close of life, with the end of its cares and responsibilities. The final record follows two years later: "THOMAS BATTELLE, the aged, deceased February 8, 1706."

MARY FISHER, the wife of THOMAS BATTELLE, was the daughter of Joshua Fisher, who was the son of "Fisher of Syleham" (England). Joshua Fisher, and his family, with his brother Antony and family, went to America.* Joshua Fisher settled first at Dedham, but afterward removed to Medfield. He made THOMAS BATTELLE executor of his will. By the church record, "Mary, the wife of Thomas Battaly, was admitted to the church, 2 of 11 mo., 1648." THOMAS BATTELLE was admitted five years later.

*Chandler Manuscript, British Museum, quoted in the Genealogical Register.
